Good afternoon. I hope your Monday has been going smoothly.

Well, we are heading into the home stretch here: two more weeks to the end of summer session two. For students who may be envisioning exams, don't be shy about asking for help: virtual tutoring is a terrific resource that is available to you, wherever you are.

Even more good news is that our Mobile Markets are up and running again, starting Wednesday on the Germantown Campus. Please take a look at the schedule of events throughout August on all three campuses. You don't have to leave your vehicle at all: just pull up and you'll get a free food package. The only requirement is that you are wearing a mask.

Many of us have already been hard at work preparing for the Fall Opening Meeting. Please mark your calendars for Monday, August 24, when we will gather virtually for this annual event. It will be our very first virtual fall meeting and I know it will be an exciting one.

One final resource is for faculty and staff. If you need essential items from your office in preparation for the fall semester, please submit this form so that the Coronavirus Advisory Team can review your request. Some basic details are needed so that we can properly space these visits and have sufficient facilities and public safety on hand to assist. Thank you for your cooperation.

Have a safe and healthy week.
