I hope everyone appreciated the unexpected holiday on Friday. Making Juneteenth a federal holiday was a delightful announcement—albeit at the last minute. Because of this schedule change, I’m sharing my videoblog with you today. It includes a bit on my own latest office visit and an upcoming conversation with incoming interim president Charlene Dukes.

For those of you still hearing questions from students about the Return-to-Campuses plan, please share the full memo on this topic and point students to upcoming forums on June 23 and June 28. Registration is required. The list of Frequently Asked Questions is also evolving with questions most relevant to students being updated regularly. Submissions for this list can be sent to studentaffairs@montgomerycollege.edu.

Employees can access specialized Return-to-Campuses information on the MC website. If you still need a vaccine, please take advantage so that we can make our communities as safe as possible.

As you know, my time at the College is winding down. In that spirit, this week will be my last one sending written messages as I begin to shift my attention to Nevada. I will be sharing a recorded conversation with incoming interim president Charlene Dukes on July 1, so I hope you will tune in for that. Until then, stay safe, and be well.
