March 3, 2025

Welcome to March, the month of midterms and spring break, and the time when the men's and women's track and field teams get into gear. As usual, the week is full of exciting opportunities for students, faculty, and staff.

Preparing for Academic Success

As we approach the midpoint of the semester, it is a good time to reflect on your academic progress. In some classes, projects or midterm exams are likely to come soon. Smart preparation for exams makes all the difference. Start early by reviewing notes and creating a study schedule. Support is available from your professor, the Library, and Learning Centers. Effective study habits lead to success. Proactively managing your time and resources will help you approach midterms with confidence.

Explore MC's Own Planetarium

In this episode of Bow Ties and Backpacks, I travel through the Milky Way in MC's own planetarium with communications major Jasjeet "Jas" Kaur Upal. What an unforgettable experience! This immersive journey brings learning to life, drawing in visual learners and anyone eager for a three-dimensional experience of the galaxies. The best part? It's open to students and the community.

Holocaust Memorial Creates Powerful Learning Experience

Feelings of belonging empower students to succeed. That's why the College is dedicated to offering events that expose people to histories and new experiences. Tomorrow night the annual Holocaust Commemoration will be held to honor the lives lost in the Holocaust, bearing witness to testimony from Peter Gorog, a survivor from Hungary. This is an incredible opportunity to learn from history, reflect on the importance of remembrance, and recognize why upholding democratic ideals and striving for societal improvement is essential.

With Raptor Regards,

Dr. Jermaine F. Williams
