

Run On Practice

today's teenagers spend billions of dollars on clothing cosmetics and other types of products some reasons explain why these teens are so interested in buying things one reason is that today's teens listen to radio and watch tv many hours each week and they are thus tempted by many advertisements another reason is that many teens work numerous hours a week and can afford to buy themselves things

psychologists offer reasons to explain why some women marry prisoners they didn't know until they wrote to them in prison one reason might be that these women feel somehow safer with their men locked up another reason may be that relationships in the "real" world involve day-to-day demands and problems some women may find a "fantasy" relationship easier to deal with than a real relationship

the shape of a bird's beak is a major influence on what the bird eats one type of hummingbird for instance has a five-inch bill enabling it to sip nectar from deep flowers the cockatoo has a hooked beak which it uses to crack nuts and the flamingo has a comb-like edge to its beak it runs that edge through the mud to sieve out tiny plants and animals to eat

people in certain occupations are influenced by how their work is described in fiction private detectives for example often use the private eyes in novels as role models for how they should behave and at central intelligence agency headquarters experts read spy thrillers for tips that they can apply to real intelligence operations

misinterpretations can be expected when translating from one language to another but they are far too common when someone is speaking our own language however there are ways to avoid misinterpreting what others are saying first listen very closely and carefully to what a speaker is saying it is also helpful to repeat in your own words what you have just heard this gives the speaker a chance to clarify any points you might have misunderstood finally ask questions whenever in doubt

when it's cold outside homeless people face the challenge of finding a warm dry place for the night one imaginative place to stay overnight is the subway which meets several needs of the homeless first of all the subway is inexpensive for about a dollar a person can travel all night long also the subway is heated making it a nice warm place to spend the night finally traveling the subway at night is legal for as long as passengers pay the fare they need not prove they have a destination

there are several types of crime the type people fear the most is crimes of violence against people including of course murder and rape the second type is crimes against property in which a criminal damages or steals something belonging to another person next are crimes without victims those who suffer from these crimes are the criminals themselves including gamblers and prostitutes finally there's white-collar crime crime committed on the job by respected people in responsible positions

products can be divided into major categories the first category is consumer products they are goods and services purchased by consumers for their own use most of the products you buy including clothing shampoo and cds are consumer goods the second category is business products sometimes called organization or industrial products these are goods and services purchased for use in the production of other goods for resale the plastic that epson buys to build its printers is an industrial product

some of the best material for your speech will come from what you read there are a few types of written materials that you should consider when preparing a speech first consider books by checking the card catalog of your library you are likely to find at least one or two books on your topic magazines are also a good resource you can discover helpful articles by checking the index of magazine articles at the library newspapers can also be useful sources of information

Run On Corrections

Today's teenagers spend billions of dollars on clothing, cosmetics, and other types of products. Some reasons explain why these teens are so interested in buying things. One reason is that today's teens listen to radio and watch TV many hours each week, and they are thus tempted by many advertisements. Another reason is that many teens work numerous hours a week and can afford to buy themselves things.

Psychologists offer reasons to explain why some women marry prisoners they didn't know until they wrote to them in prison. One reason might be that these women feel somehow safer with their men locked up. Another reason may be that relationships in the "real" world involve day-to-day demands and problems. Some women may find a "fantasy" relationship easier to deal with than a real relationship.

The shape of a bird's beak is a major influence on what the bird eats. One type of hummingbird, for instance, has a five-inch bill, enabling it to sip nectar from deep flowers. The cockatoo has a hooked beak, which it uses to crack nuts. And the flamingo has a comb-like edge to its beak. It runs that edge through the mud to sieve out tiny plants and animals to eat.

People in certain occupations are influenced by how their work is described in fiction. Private detectives, for example, often use the private eyes in novels as role models for how they should behave. And at Central Intelligence Agency headquarters, experts read spy thrillers for tips that they can apply to real intelligence operations.

Misinterpretations can be expected when translating from one language to another. But they are far too common when someone is speaking our own language. However, there are ways to avoid misinterpreting what others are saying. First, listen very closely and carefully to what a speaker is saying. It is also helpful to repeat in your own words what you have just heard. This gives the speaker a chance to clarify any points you might have misunderstood. Finally, ask questions whenever in doubt.

When it's cold outside, homeless people face the challenge of finding a warm, dry place for the night. One imaginative place to stay overnight is the subway, which meets several needs of the homeless. First of all, the subway is inexpensive. For about a dollar, a person can travel all night long. Also, the subway is heated, making it a nice warm place to spend the night. Finally, traveling the subway at night is legal, for as long as passengers pay the fare, they need not prove they have a destination.

There are several types of crime. The type people fear the most is crimes of violence against people, including, of course, murder and rape. The second type is crimes against property, in which a criminal damages or steals something belonging to another person. Next are crimes without victims. Those who suffer from these crimes are the criminals themselves, including gamblers and prostitutes. Finally, there's white-collar crime, crime committed on the job by respected people in responsible positions.

Products can be divided into major categories. The first category is consumer products. They are goods and services purchased by consumers for their own use. Most of the products you buy, including clothing, shampoo, and CDs, are consumer goods. The second category is business products, sometimes called organization or industrial products. These are goods and services purchased for use in the production of other goods for resale. The plastic that Epson buys to build its printers is an industrial product.

Some of the best material for your speech will come from what you read. There are a few types of written materials that you should consider when preparing a speech. First, consider books. By checking the card catalog of your library, you are likely to find at least one or two books on your topic. Magazines are also a good resource. You can discover helpful articles by checking the index of magazine articles at the library. Newspapers can also be useful sources of information.